*Beet = Sugar raw material grown only in Hokkaido. Also called beet or sugar beet.

And the other day, the sugar beets sprouted well. It's been nine years since I started seeing sugar beet sprouts every spring. When I saw germination for the first time in my agricultural training, I was amazed to see that it would become the sugar that we are so familiar with, and my daughter was so excited to see it sprout for the first time on her own farm. After she was able to walk, I took my daughter's hand and went to show her the seeds, saying, ``Look at them! They're so cute!" Every year, I watched them germinate with joy in my heart. How was this year, 6 years since you became independent? Unfortunately, I feel that the unconditional joy and excitement I felt has faded with time. It is often said that you should never forget your initial feelings, but it is impossible to keep the feelings you had at the beginning without letting them fade. Circumstances change, goals change, and feelings change. It's not just about germination, it's about being able to work with my family, being a

I think it will just disappear on its own without any effort.

However, it is important to renew your motivation and passion as time goes by.

For that reason, continue to have a feeling of gratitude

I'm sure you can do that.

Spring while thinking about that.

In the field, the snow has melted and the wheat has started to appear. It begins...!

!!!! I'll do my best this season too ...+°.('∇`)°+
